Description:

This Workshop will provided experience and guidance on how to integrate entrepreneurial minded learning into their undergraduate engineering courses. Entrepreneurial minded learning (EML) is defined and motivating factors for infusing EML into the engineering curriculum are discussed. Case studies of integrating EML into traditional mechanical engineering machine and systems design courses are presented: (1) a 1st year Introduction to Mechanical Engineering course that employs a systems engineering approach to design, and, (2) a 3rd year Mechanism Design Course that utilizes a project based learning pedagogy. Participants will leave the webinar with a working understanding of EML and two case studies of implementing EML into undergraduate engineering courses.
