Description:

Proficiency in communication skills are an entry point for employment for all sections of the society. Without a reasonably good command over English Language and Communication Skills, it is impossible to acquire high profile jobs in the growing corporate sector. Thus English language skills are grist to the mill of technical and commercial knowledge. The purpose of the present paper is to evaluate the common core process of English language learning as an integral part of academic course right from the aims and objectives of instituting the course to the designing of the syllabus, the process of teaching and learning, the academic and non-academic environment, and the final outcome at the end of the studies in terms of capabilities of students to use English for both academic and employment purpose.
